

Leveraging Your Leadership Style

coaching focus

To lead well, you need to know yourself. This means understanding how you prefer to behave and communicate with others as well as how you might be perceived. Using the profiling tool, DISC, you will not only learn more about your own style, you will be shown how to identify the behavioural and communication styles of your colleagues and team members. You can then make use of this insight to improve communication, lifting team cohesion and performance. The outcome is a more effective leader. The program will assist leaders to gain a greater insight into the way they interact and will result in improved team dynamics. This self-awareness is fundamental to good leadership.
